

Special Issue on Social Anthropology

Call for Papers

Social Anthropology is a branch of anthropology that examines the patterns of social relationships, cultural practices, and everyday life within human societies through comparative and field-based research. It investigates how people organize kinship, institutions, belief systems, and economic activities, while also exploring the meanings individuals attach to their actions and interactions. Drawing on methods such as ethnography and participant observation, the field provides in-depth insights into cultural diversity, social change, and the dynamics of power, identity, and community across different historical and contemporary contexts.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Social Anthropology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Cultural anthropology
- Economic anthropology
- Political anthropology
- Medical anthropology
- Urban anthropology
- Rural anthropology
- Development anthropology
- Environmental anthropology
- Linguistic anthropology
- Psychological anthropology
- Visual anthropology
- Digital anthropology
- Legal anthropology
- Religious anthropology
- Applied anthropology
- Cognitive anthropology

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Social Anthropology” should be selected during your submission.
