

Special Issue on Infectious Diseases and Public Health

Call for Papers

Infectious Diseases and Public Health examines the causes, transmission, prevention and control of infectious agents that affect populations. It integrates epidemiology, microbiology, immunology and health policy to monitor disease outbreaks, assess risk factors, and design effective interventions. The field emphasizes vaccination, surveillance systems, antimicrobial stewardship and community-based strategies to reduce morbidity and mortality while promoting global health security and equitable access to care.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Infectious Diseases and Public Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Epidemiology of infectious diseases
- Medical microbiology
- Infectious disease modeling
- Immunology and host response
- Antimicrobial resistance
- Outbreak investigation and surveillance
- Global health and emerging infections
- Infection prevention and control
- Diagnostic microbiology & bioinformatics
- Infection control and hospital epidemiology
- Environmental and one health approaches
- Health policy and public health interventions
- Social & behavioral sciences in infectious diseases
- Digital health for infectious disease control

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Infectious Diseases and Public Health” should be chosen during your submission.
