

Special Issue on Law and Development

Call for Papers

Law and Development examines the relationship between legal systems, public institutions, and socioeconomic development. It explores how laws, regulations, governance structures, and judicial processes influence economic growth, social justice, human rights, environmental sustainability, and institutional capacity building. The field also investigates legal reforms, regulatory frameworks, access to justice, and the role of law in addressing contemporary development challenges at local, national, and global levels. By integrating perspectives from law, economics, political science, and development studies, Law and Development seeks to understand how effective legal institutions can promote inclusive, sustainable, and equitable development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Law and Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Legal reform
- Rule of law
- Human rights law
- Constitutional development
- Governance and institutions
- Public policy
- Administrative law
- Economic regulation
- Environmental law
- International development law
- Access to justice
- Legal empowerment
- Anti-corruption law
- Social justice and equity
- Digital governance
- Sustainable development law

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Law and Development” should be selected during your submission.
