

Special Issue on
Food Culture and Culinary Traditions

Call for Papers

Food Culture and Culinary Traditions explores the historical, social, cultural, and artistic dimensions of food and culinary practices across different societies and regions. The field examines how food reflects cultural identity, heritage, religion, migration, social customs, and economic development while also investigating traditional cooking methods, gastronomy, food rituals, and contemporary culinary innovations. It integrates perspectives from anthropology, sociology, history, nutrition, tourism, and cultural studies to better understand the role of food in shaping human experiences, intercultural exchange, community traditions, and sustainable food practices in a globalized world.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Food Culture and Culinary Traditions. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Culinary heritage
- Food anthropology
- Gastronomy studies
- Traditional cuisine studies
