

Special Issue on Occupational and Environmental Health

Call for Papers

Occupational and Environmental Health studies how workplace and environmental factors affect human health and well-being. It focuses on identifying, assessing and preventing risks such as chemical exposure, physical hazards, biological agents and psychosocial stressors. The field integrates public health, medicine and environmental science to promote safe working conditions, reduce environmental health risks, and improve population health outcomes through regulation, prevention strategies and health protection policies.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Occupational and Environmental Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Occupational diseases and epidemiology
- Occupational safety and injury prevention
- Occupational therapy and rehabilitation
- Industrial hygiene
- Air quality and respiratory health
- Environmental toxicology
- Environmental exposure assessment
- Occupational safety and risk assessment
- Ergonomics and human factors
- Occupational health nursing
- Occupational mental health and stress
- Workplace safety and health management
- Occupational health policy and regulation
- Environmental justice and health equity
- Occupational and public health
- Climate change and health
- Hospital occupational medicine

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Occupational and Environmental Health” should be chosen during your submission.
