
Special Issue on Computer Science & Systems

Call for Papers

Computer Science & Systems is an academic field that studies the theory, design, development, and integration of computer technologies and complex computing systems. It encompasses areas such as algorithms, software engineering, computer architecture, operating systems, databases, networks, artificial intelligence and distributed systems. The field focuses on creating efficient, reliable and scalable computational solutions to support scientific research, industry applications, communication and digital transformation across diverse domains.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Computer Science & Systems. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Algorithms and theoretical computer science
- Computer architecture and embedded systems
- Computer system and programming
- Database systems and information management
- Operating systems and system software
- Computer networks and distributed systems
- Networking, mobile & wireless systems
- Software engineering and system development
- Artificial intelligence and machine learning
- Cybersecurity and information assurance
- Human-computer interaction and user experience
- High-performance computing and intelligent systems
- Artificial neural networks
- Computing and information systems

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Computer Science & Systems” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:
