

Special Issue on
Environmental Health, Sustainability, and Public Health
Call for Papers

Environmental Health, Sustainability, and Public Health explores the connections between environmental conditions, human well-being, and long-term societal development. It addresses the health implications of climate variability, pollution, resource depletion, urbanization, sanitation, hazardous exposures, and ecological change, while examining strategies for creating healthier and more resilient communities. Particular attention is given to preventive approaches, environmental risk management, sustainable resource use, health equity, and evidence-based policies that can reduce environmental threats and strengthen population health.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Environmental Health, Sustainability, and Public Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Environmental epidemiology
- Climate change and health
- Air quality and health
- Water quality and sanitation
- Environmental toxicology
- Waste management
- Food safety and nutrition
- Occupational and environmental exposure
- Urban environmental health
- Ecosystem health
- Sustainable resource management
- Environmental risk assessment
- Health impact assessment
- Disaster resilience and preparedness
- Environmental health policy
- Health equity and sustainability

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - *Environmental Health, Sustainability, and Public Health” should be selected during your submission.
