
Special Issue on Sociology and Criminology

Call for Papers

Sociology is a discipline that uses empirical investigation and critical analysis to study the structure and activities of human society. Sociologists' research on society includes a series of studies from macro-structures to micro-behaviors, including race, ethnicity, class, and gender. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Sociology and Criminology.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Sociology and Criminology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Juvenile delinquency
- Educational sociology
- Social psychology
- Public relations
- Cultural sociology and its diversity
- Applied sociology
- Economics and social sciences
- Social and criminological behavior
- Criminal law
- Crime prevention

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Sociology and Criminology” should be selected during your submission.
