

Special Issue on Social and Psychological Sciences

Call for Papers

Social and Psychological Sciences explores human behavior, thoughts, emotions, and social interactions across individual, group, and societal levels. It combines insights from psychology, sociology, anthropology, and related disciplines to understand how people perceive the world, make decisions, relate to others, and develop over time. This field investigates a wide range of topics such as identity, mental health, communication, cultural norms, and social structures, aiming to improve well-being, foster empathy, and address complex social challenges. By bridging theory and practice, it contributes to fields like education, healthcare, public policy, and organizational development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Social and Psychological Sciences. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Behavioral science
- Clinical psychology
- Community psychology
- Counseling psychology
- Cultural psychology
- Developmental psychology
- Educational psychology
- Health psychology
- Industrial-organizational psychology
- Personality psychology
- Political psychology
- Social psychology

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Social and Psychological Sciences” should be selected during your submission.
