

Special Issue on Youth Studies

Call for Papers

Youth Studies examines the experiences, development, identities, and social participation of young people within diverse cultural, economic, and political contexts. It explores topics such as education, employment, health and well-being, digital media, civic engagement, social inclusion, youth culture, identity formation, family relationships, and the impacts of globalization and technological change on youth. The field promotes interdisciplinary research that enhances understanding of the opportunities and challenges facing young people and supports the development of evidence-based policies and practices that foster their well-being, empowerment, and positive contribution to society.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Youth Studies. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Youth development
- Youth education
- Youth employment
- Youth health
- Youth well-being
- Youth identity
- Youth culture
- Youth participation
- Youth leadership
- Youth empowerment
- Youth justice
- Youth mental health
- Youth digital engagement
- Youth social inclusion
- Youth civic engagement
- Youth policy

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Youth Studies” should be selected during your submission.
