Special Issue on Community and Social Development

Call for Papers

Community and Social Development examines the social, economic, cultural, and institutional processes that shape community well-being, social inclusion, and sustainable development. The topic includes community participation, social capital, local development, social cohesion, poverty reduction, inequality, education, health and well-being, community empowerment, migration, social innovation, civil society, and the role of public institutions in supporting communities. It also considers changing social structures, demographic trends, digital technologies, and community-based approaches to addressing contemporary social challenges. The special issue welcomes theoretical, empirical, and applied research that explores strategies for strengthening communities, promoting social progress, and improving quality of life across diverse social and cultural contexts.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Community and Social Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Community development
- Community participation and empowerment
- Social capital and community networks
- Social inclusion and equity
