

Special Issue on Sustainable Ecology and Conservation Practices

Call for Papers

Sustainable Ecology and Conservation Practices is an interdisciplinary research theme that focuses on understanding ecological systems and developing effective strategies to protect biodiversity while ensuring the sustainable use of natural resources. It encompasses studies on ecosystem resilience, habitat restoration, conservation biology, climate change adaptation, and human–environment interactions, with an emphasis on evidence-based policies and practical management approaches. The theme highlights innovative conservation practices that balance ecological integrity, social equity, and economic development, aiming to support long-term environmental sustainability at local, regional, and global scales.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Sustainable Ecology and Conservation Practices. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Agroecology and sustainable agriculture
- Biodiversity assessment and monitoring
- Climate change ecology and adaptation
- Community-based conservation
- Conservation biology
- Ecological modeling and sustainability assessment
- Ecological resilience and stability
- Ecosystem management and restoration
- Ecosystem services and valuation
- Environmental policy and governance
- Forest ecology and sustainable forestry
- Human–environment interactions
- Landscape ecology and land-use planning
- Marine and freshwater conservation
- Sustainable natural resource management
- Wildlife conservation and management

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Sustainable Ecology and Conservation Practices” should be selected during your submission.
