

Special Issue on High Risk Pregnancy

Call for Papers

High Risk Pregnancy is a medical and research field that focuses on pregnancies with increased risk of complications for the mother, fetus, or both. It studies factors such as maternal age, pre-existing medical conditions, obstetric history, and lifestyle, as well as prenatal diagnosis, monitoring, and interventions. The field aims to optimize maternal and fetal health through risk assessment, specialized care, and evidence-based management strategies to prevent adverse outcomes and improve pregnancy safety and outcomes.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on High Risk Pregnancy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Maternal-fetal medicine
- Obstetric complications and risk assessment
- Advanced prenatal screening and diagnostics
- Multiple and high-order pregnancies
- Maternal chronic diseases and pregnancy
- Fetal growth, development and monitoring
- Pregnancy complications related to maternal age
- Obstetric surgery and interventions
- Preterm birth
- Ectopic pregnancy
- Placental disorders
- Infections in pregnancy
- Fetal intervention & therapy
- Preeclampsia
- Hypertensive disorders in pregnancy
