

Special Issue on Environmental Governance and Policy

Call for Papers

Environmental Governance and Policy is a field that examines the political dimensions of environmental issues, focusing on how governments, institutions, social movements, and international actors address ecological challenges. It explores the development and implementation of environmental policies, the role of power and ideology in shaping environmental discourse, and the conflicts between economic growth and ecological sustainability. This area also investigates global cooperation on climate change, environmental justice, green political theory, and the influence of public opinion and activism. By analyzing the governance of natural resources and the political processes behind environmental decision-making, Environmental Governance and Policy seeks to promote sustainable and equitable solutions to pressing ecological problems.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Environmental Governance and Policy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Biodiversity governance
- Climate governance
- Community-based environmental management
- Energy and environmental policy
- Environmental compliance and enforcement
- Environmental economics
- Environmental impact assessment
- Environmental law and regulation
- Environmental planning and administration
- Environmental policy analysis
- Governance of protected areas
- International environmental agreements
- Natural resource management
- Pollution control policy
- Sustainable development policy
- Water resources governance

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Environmental Governance and Policy” should be selected during your submission.
