Special Issue on Legal and Political Studies

Call for Papers

Legal and Political Studies explores the interaction between legal systems, political institutions, and governance processes. It examines how laws are created, interpreted, and enforced within various political contexts, and how legal frameworks shape public policy, political behavior, and societal order. The field encompasses constitutional law, administrative law, human rights, political theory, and comparative politics, providing insights into power structures, governance mechanisms, and the rule of law. By integrating legal analysis with political science perspectives, Legal and Political Studies aims to deepen understanding of institutional dynamics, policy development, and the mechanisms that promote justice, accountability, and democratic governance.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Legal and Political Studies. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Administrative law
- Civil liberties and social justice
- Comparative politics
- Constitutional law
