Special Issue on
Public Administration and Politics

Call for Papers

Public Administration and Politics explores the structures, processes, and practices through which public policies are developed, implemented, and evaluated to meet societal needs. The field addresses how governments, institutions, and organizations manage resources, deliver public services, and maintain accountability, transparency, and effectiveness. It integrates insights from political science, management, and policy studies to analyze decision-making, bureaucratic behavior, regulatory frameworks, and citizen engagement. By investigating topics such as public sector reform, institutional capacity, governance mechanisms, and policy evaluation, this area provides essential knowledge for enhancing government performance, promoting good governance, and ensuring sustainable and equitable public service delivery.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Public Administration and Politics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Administrative law
- Bureaucratic behavior
- Citizen engagement and participation
- E-governance
- Human resource management in the public sector
- Institutional design and reform
- Local and regional governance
- Organizational theory in public administration
- Performance management in government
- Policy implementation
- Public finance and budgeting
- Public policy analysis
