

Special Issue on International Affairs and Political Analysis

Call for Papers

International Affairs and Political Analysis examines the dynamics of global politics, state behavior, and international systems through analytical and theoretical frameworks. It focuses on issues such as foreign policy, diplomacy, security, and global governance, while exploring how political, economic, and social factors shape interactions among states and non-state actors. Integrating insights from political science, economics, history, and law, the field analyzes power relations, conflict and cooperation, policy decision-making, and institutional structures at regional and global levels. It also emphasizes critical evaluation of contemporary challenges—such as geopolitical tensions, economic interdependence, and transnational issues—to inform strategic thinking and effective policymaking.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring International Affairs and Political Analysis. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- International relations
- Foreign policy analysis
