

Special Issue on Peace, Conflict, and Social Development

Call for Papers

Peace, Conflict, and Social Development examines the causes, dynamics, and consequences of conflict, as well as the processes that promote peace, stability, and sustainable social progress. It explores topics such as conflict resolution, peacebuilding, social justice, human security, governance, community resilience, and post-conflict reconstruction. The field emphasizes the role of institutions, policies, and social engagement in addressing inequalities, preventing violence, and fostering inclusive development. By integrating perspectives from sociology, political science, economics, and international relations, it seeks to advance knowledge and practical solutions for building peaceful and prosperous societies.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Peace, Conflict, and Social Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Peace studies
- Conflict resolution
- Peacebuilding and reconciliation
- Human security
- Social development
- Community development
- International relations
- Governance and public policy
- Social justice
- Human rights
- Post-conflict reconstruction
- Development studies
- Migration and displacement
- Gender and peace
